

The Interior Journal.

E. C. WALTON.

BECAUSE of the visit of several preachers to his sick bedside, it was reported that the heathen editor, C. C. Moore, had recanted his infidel theories and wanted to join the church he has wronged. He has now ordered that no minister be admitted into his presence hereafter. Editor Moore, who used to be a preacher himself, is evidently nerving himself to die, as he has lived an uncompromising, unrepentant infidel and blasphemer.

THE independent voter is pretty numerous, and he shows that he has surmounted the difficulties thrown in his way by the official ballot. The election of Berry in Pennsylvania, Jerome in New York City, Moran in Boston and Pattison as governor of Ohio, although all the republican candidates except Herriek got majorities of from 27,000 to 39,000 proves that he knows how to mark a ballot.

W. B. HALDEMAN, editor of the Louisville Times, has decided finally to enter the race for United States Senator from Kentucky. Mr. Haldeeman makes the race a three-cornered one and there seems to be a warm time in store for all of them this winter at Frankfort.

A LOUISVILLE couple gave a swell dinner in honor of their dog's 18th birthday. If they had had some children, as they should have had, they wouldn't have had to make such noodles of themselves.

A MOUSE in a woman's bonnet broke up a revival at Marion, O. The devil himself could not have created as much consternation among the fair sex as the little rodent.

POLITICAL.

President Roosevelt has sent a message of congratulation to King Haakon VII, the new ruler of Norway.

Circuit Judge A. S. Berry held as void an ordinance of Newport, giving preference to union labor in all city contracts.

The suit contesting the election of Democrats to offices in Louisville was filed by the attorney for the Fusionists yesterday.

The New York grand jury has indicted a man who attempted as a joke to vote illegally under the name of John Rockefeller.

The Kentucky State Journal published at Frankfort by W. P. Walton is decidedly the best paper the capital city has ever had.—Danville News.

Representative-elect Munnell Wilson has agreed for $300 to walk all the way from Madisonville to Frankfort for the Legislature's opening.

Gov. Folk has removed Police Commissioner Andrew F. Blong, of St. Louis, and has named George P. Jones as his successor. Blong is expected to resist the order of removal in the courts.

We would like to see Judge Saufley, of Stanford, enter the Senatorial race and win it. We need men of such high character and pre-eminent ability to represent us at the national capital.—Danville News.

The Kentucky State Conference of Charities and Corrections, which is in session at Owensboro, will ask the Legislature to establish juvenile courts, reformatory for women and other remedial legislation.

Senator Thomas C. Platt was the chief witness before the legislative investigation committee in New York. He testified that he had collected money for the Republican State campaign fund from the three big insurance companies for a period of about 15 years.

Among the United States Senators who failed to carry their home towns at the last election were Foraker and Dick, of Ohio; Penrose, of Pennsylvania; Gorman, of Maryland, and Smoot of Utah. Pretty soon we will have to print: Among the United States Senators who failed of re-election was Senator Blackburn, who, while he lived, he lived in clover, and when he died he died all over.

President Roosevelt announced the following appointments for Kentucky, to be effective at the expiration of the terms of the incumbents: William G. Dearing, of Flemingsburg, to be Surveyor of the Port of Louisville, vice C. M. Barnett. George W. Long, of Leitchfield, to be United States Marshal for the Western district of Kentucky, vice Addison D. James. Capt. Stephen D. Sharp, to be United States Marshal for the Eastern district. Reuben D. Hill, to be United States Attorney for the Western district. James H. Tinsley, to be United States Attorney for the Eastern district. Internal Revenue Collectors—George W. Lieberth at Covington; Edward T. Franks, at Owensboro; Samuel J. Roberts, at Lexington, and J. A. Craft, at Louisville, will be continued in office.

Bobbitt On Eloquence And Beauty.

STANFORD, Nov. 22nd.—This is the third week of my delightful attendance on circuit court. I would not be very reluctant to establish an office in this great town. If I did not live at Crab Orchard I would live at Stanford. If I were not Alexander the Great I would be Diogenes.

I have had more civil business this court than I have had for years. But the litigants have to stand back and remove their sacks for the mills of justice to grind out the criminal turns. Term after term the litigants with civil suits have their cases usurped by the criminal cases that arise between courts and then come in, and under the code, have precedence and the old tax payer must stand back and give place to the criminals. Your county attorney is able and fearless in discharge of what he conceives his duty to be. Judge Saufley's speech was a bouquet of classic beauty in which genius and eloquence wove a wreath of classic beauty scarcely ever equaled. His magnificent charge of Bonaparte with the tri-colored flag of France; at the bridge of Lodi, the 600 at Balaklava and the 20,000 Virginians at Gettysburg against a fortified enemy outnumbering them four to one, and the gallant knights of old shivering their lances against the walls of Ascalon, were something for pyrotechnic beauty and grandeur of glory I never heard surpassed. Owsley's speech was the strongest argument I ever heard; all solid shot and bursting shell, not a sprig of rhetoric, not a flower of eloquence. All stern, cold facts and inflexible law. What a pity that the fickle, popular wave would cast such a matchless lawyer upon the barren strand of defeat! A speaker is almost perfect who can speak for an hour and never say a wrong thing nor omit a right one. John Samuel, you are a better interrogator than the great Colossus for you never ask an incompetent or irrelevant question. Hardin, for the Commonwealth, surprised even his greatest admirers. I am only writing up the lawyers for the Commonwealth this time. I perhaps shall do justice to the other side hereafter if I can ever wield a pen able enough. For your county attorney I want to add that for force of expression and grandeur of valor you are unrivaled; and yet this county has had a Miller and a Bobbitt! But let me leave the great warriors wreathed in their glory, and pay some attention to Nature's fairer flowers.

In one of my long, vespertine peregrinations last week I met an attractive teacher and some little children, accompanied by a lady so grand and stately robed in black, that in all my reading and wildest imagination I never dreamed of one so grand and queenly. If she remembered the fine looking gentleman with his hat in his left hand, right full of gold and the literary gems flowing in copious showers from his lips and will address him at Crab Orchard, her letter will certainly be answered. And the affluent widow in an adjacent county, to whom an editor offered $10.00 for eight pages I wrote her, I say sell it to him and I will write you another worth $20.00. One of my clients led me to the telephone the other day and there I was entertained and bewildered in a maze of beauty from which there will never be an extrication. I met her, if an angel of such rare delicate beauty can be designated by an appellative pronoun, of the feminine gender. I shall not write her name, although she told me to, but I shall not desecrate heavenly creatures by exposing their names to the eyes of the profane.

But this is what I said to her, with my left hand full of hat, my right hand full of gold and a mouthful of pearls: I make my obeisance to the queen of telephone girls. I have served written notice on one lady to marry her after court adjourns, and to another lassie I am engaged to be married when the June roses bloom. All may be changed by a telephone soon. To-morrow evening we are to sup at the Restaurant Jones. Yours in the misery of delight.

IN NEIGHBORING COUNTIES.

Uninsured property worth $8,000 was destroyed by fire at Germantown, Ky. R. T. Warmock, a merchant of Carter county, committed suicide with a shotgun.

Thomas Morrisay, of Junction City, had an eye shot out while hunting near Covington.

The Farmers Bank of Kirksville, Madison county, was incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000.

Luther Thompson, a brakeman whose home was at Eubanks, was mangled to death near Somerset while crossing between two cars.

Sixty shares of stock in the Anderson County Deposit Bank, of Lawrenceburg, belonging to the estate of the late James R. York, Sr., were sold at an average of $203.

At a public sale of lots, in South Corbin, about $20,000 was realized. Private sales amounted to over $9,000. Investors from different parts of the State were present.

At Richmond Richard Gilbert, colored, was shot and probably fatally injured by John Woods, white, a prominent farmer. The two had had trouble over trivial matter. Woods was arrested and placed in jail.

John W. Partin, deputy sheriff, fatally shot Coley Simpson at Coalport, a mining town, six miles from Barbourville. Partin had a warrant for Elmer Simpson, a son of Coley, and in a dispute over his bond the killing occurred.

Lee Hart, one of the proprietors of the Reed Hotel, Lexington, and a well-known business man, was arrested on a warrant charging grand larceny, sworn out by Thornton Moore, a wealthy young farmer. Moore charges that Hart unlawfully took a collie pup, whose value was $100. Mr. Hart immediately gave bond for $200 and was released.
